

Ghost Walk Through Cincinnati

Written by Jaunting

Friday, 14 October 2011 11:29 - Last Updated Friday, 14 October 2011 13:28

The hairs on the back of your neck have nothing to do with the perceived drop in temperature.

Your palms get sweaty and you'd swear there's someone standing right behind you, although you know it to be a dark void.

Cincinnati has a dark past, so you can imagine the bevy of eerie tales that contribute to the "Queen City is Haunted" walking tour. My husband, Nick, and I decide to join these "ghost hunters" for a little fright and a load of history. Hosted by American Legacy Tours, who pride themselves on a rich intertwining of dramatic storytelling and cold hard facts, this special excursion runs through October 29.

The tour begins at Cincy Haus, located at 1218 Vine Street in historic Over-The-Rhine, where guides debrief you on the basics of ghost hunting and how to use your "ghost meter" which detects small electromagnetic field fluctuations. You will be asked to sign a waiver, as the tour will wind you through tunnels, steep staircases, and buildings that have seen better days. They also warn you that other tourists' supernatural experiences did more than produce goosebumps. (Whether that's for fun or a literal warning, I couldn't be sure).

Ghost Walk Through Cincinnati

Written by Jaunting

Friday, 14 October 2011 11:29 - Last Updated Friday, 14 October 2011 13:28

Ghost Walk Through Cincinnati

Written by Jaunting

Friday, 14 October 2011 11:29 - Last Updated Friday, 14 October 2011 13:28

High Voltage DC Generator at the University of Cincinnati

Ghost Walk Through Cincinnati

Written by Jaunting

Friday, 14 October 2011 11:29 - Last Updated Friday, 14 October 2011 13:28

Ghost Walk Through Cincinnati

Written by Jaunting

Friday, 14 October 2011 11:29 - Last Updated Friday, 14 October 2011 13:28

~~Some of the things that I did on my walk through Cincinnati were to take photos and to do some research on the history of the city. I also did some research on the history of the city.~~